- Elements Panel is a free panel that helps designers to work faster and more efficiently. It helps designers to manipulate the design without the hassle of opening and closing the layers. Designers can easily drag and drop images. It also helps them to identify the changes that needs to be made and the places to start. The latest version of Photoshop incorporates a couple of different editing features to present new options. Photoshop CS (stands for “Creative Suite”) features the option to transform images into panoramas, which combine several photos into a seamless image that can then be stitched together. It also features the new Content-Aware Fill feature that can replace specific colors or regions of an image with nearby content, and the Content-Aware Move, that moves selected areas within the image to meet the available area of space. In other words, the new content-aware fill feature can replace green foliage with foliage that looks like it came from the surrounding area. This can be used anywhere that is difficult to replace with an edited image. The Content-Aware Move feature considers content and objects that already exist in the image, and moves it around accordingly, which allows more accurate rendering of movement and deformation. This is a hugely useful feature for anything that moves or deforms objects. The dynamic camera features, the latest version of Photoshop, adds new features such as the ability to add animations, scroll, and zoom shadows while you shoot. This allows for constantly changing visual effects for any still or animated scene.
